

Drees & Sommer UK appoints new directors to drive UK expansion

Drees & Sommer UK has announced the appointment of two new directors in a move to grow market presence for the leading international consulting, planning and project management firm's UK division.

Layth Madi has been named Managing Director of Drees & Sommer UK, a role he will be sharing with co-Managing Director Phillip Ratcliffe. Layth previously held the role of Director of Real Estate Consulting at Drees & Sommer. Layth will oversee strategic and advisory services, including Technical Due Diligence, for clients in the UK and across EMEA.

Drawing on over 30 years' experience in project management and construction, Matthew Greenstreet joins Drees & Sommer from Mott McDonald and will lead Drees & Sommer UK's project management division.

Layth Madi, Managing Director at Drees & Sommer UK, said: "I am very pleased to have been named as a Managing Director, and look forward to working with the UK team to grow our local presence, as well as further establishing the London office's role as a gateway to global markets. International portfolio managers make real estate investment and divestment decisions in London, and need high-quality technical due diligence support to evaluate and optimize their portfolios. We are here to offer them tailored, expert support."

Matthew Greenstreet, Director of Project Management and Construction at Drees & Sommer UK, said: "I am excited to join Drees & Sommer at a time when the London business is growing, as there is scope to strengthen the brand's presence in the UK market, and become a trusted partner for major national and international projects. Informed by Drees & Sommer's global research and international best practice, our local team can deliver tailored strategies to project management that result in added value for our clients."

Layth Madi and Matthew Greenstreet will be attending MIPIM in Cannes from 12-15th March.
